

Manuscript Pamphleteering in Early Stuart England
29-30 June 2018
British Library and UCL Institute of Advanced Studies

FRIDAY (British Library)

9:30-9:45 Welcome

9:45-11:15 Session 1

- Richard Serjeantson (University of Cambridge), “At the source of the river of time: Francis Bacon circulates his manuscripts”
- Angus Vine (University of Stirling), “‘There shalbe none dispersed’: Manuscript and the Circulation of Bacon's Speeches”

11:15-11:30 Break

11:30-13:00 Session 2

- Laura Stewart (University of York), “Manuscript circulation and the mobilisation of opinion in early Stuart Scotland”
- Victoria Anker (University of Birmingham), “‘They were our owne nation and our owne blood’: English responses to the Bishops’ Wars”

13:00-14:00 Lunch

14:00-15:00 Archive Session

15:00-15:15 Break

15:15-16:45 Session 3

- Richard Bell (University of Birmingham), “Officeholding and political grievance in early Stuart manuscript pamphlets”
- Alexandra Gajda (University of Oxford), “Antiquaries and the invention of the history of Parliament”

SATURDAY (UCL IAS)

9:30-10:00 Coffee

10:00-11:30 Session 4

- Emily Jennings (University of Oxford), “The End of the World Again: The Apocalyptic “St Denis” Prophecy (c.1570) Repurposed in Early Stuart Manuscripts”
- David Como (Stanford University), “Undead Manuscripts: the Afterlives of the Early Stuart Manuscript Underworld”

11:30-11:45 Break

11:45-13:15 Session 5

- John Reeks (University of Bristol), “Archbishop Laud’s Case for Reforming the Church of England”
- Anthony Milton (University of Sheffield), “Manuscript tracts and the Response to Laudianism”

13:15-14:00 Lunch

14:15-15:00 Presenting the Database

15:00-15:15 Break

15:15-16:45 Session 6

- Alison Wiggins (University of Glasgow), “Digital Materiality and Early Modern Collections”
- Peter Lake (Vanderbilt), “101 Uses for a Manuscript Separate”

17:00-18:00 Final Discussion