

Eighteenth Century Now: The Current State of British History

In honour of our 30th anniversary, the organisers of the IHR British History in the Long Eighteenth Century Seminar are pleased to invite you to join us for a free one-day conference on Friday 26 April 2019. The conference will bring together postgraduate, early-career, and established historians to map out the current and future directions of eighteenth-century British history.

A range of invited expert speakers, including Prof. Joanna Innes (Oxford), Prof. Matthew McCormack (Northampton), Prof. Carl Griffin (Sussex), Prof. Penelope Corfield (Royal Holloway/Newcastle) and Prof. Tim Hitchcock (Sussex) will discuss the following themes:

- Methodological 'Turns'
- State, Religion and the People
- Enlightenment and Emotions
- Gender and Empire
- The Short and Long Term

With the generous help of our sponsors, the conference is free to attend and travel bursaries are available to PGR/ECR students. However, early booking for a place is essential and queries regarding travel bursaries should be directed to our official email address: <https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/18th-century-now-tickets-56636007824>

Date: Friday 26 April 2019, 9:00-18:00.

Venue: Jeremy Bentham Room, Main Building, UCL, Gower Street, London, WC1E 6BT

Contact: 18thCNow@gmail.com Tweet: #18thCNow

